

HER "HOUSE BEAUTIFUL," LOVE CAME BETWEEN.

Edward T. Ustick Got Divorce from Wife on Remarkable Revelations of Infatuation
for Old Schoolmate's Husband, Patterson.

ST. LOUIS, March 2.—Edward T. Ustick, a prominent merchant of this city, has been granted a divorce from his wife, Sue L. Ustick. She left the case on by default.

The charge grew out of Mrs. Ustick's love affair with A. Waite Patterson, a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, and it was one of the most remarkable ever unfolded in a court of law.

Mrs. Patterson was a schoolmate in the days when Mrs. Ustick was Miss Sue Anderson, a daughter of Judge Anderson, of Collinsville, Ill.

After Mrs. Patterson had divorced her husband for cruelty, Mrs. Ustick became enamored of him. He used his Board of Trade credit in corresponding with her, and a letter which Mr. Ustick captured was not deciphered for a month.

It revealed that Mr. Patterson was making a "House Beautiful" for his beloved in Wabash avenue, Chicago. When Mrs. Ustick left her husband and went to the "House Beautiful" she was followed by detectives.

An arrest followed and the constable who raided the Wabash avenue flat said it looked like a Persian garden. His prisoners were attired in kimonos when he apprehended them.

DALY'S GHOST IN WAR OF MILLIONS

"Kick from the Grave" of Copper
King Smashes Clark's
Plans.

When Wall street hears that a fight between millionaires is in progress bankers, brokers and operators open their eyes wide.

Today a story is being whispered about that the recent rise in the price of Amalgamated Copper Company stock is not due to a combine between the Rockefeller and Clark interests, but because of good business and no legislation to block the mines' operations.

Young W. A. Clark, the millionaire son, will not be president of the company, so the story goes, because the shade of old Marcus Daly, his father's lifelong enemy, stands in the pathway of the young man's ambition.

It was said that John D. Rockefeller, William Rockefeller and H. H. Rogers, all Standard Oil men, had patented up past differences with Senator Clark and would operate the amalgamated company in each other's interests.

Incidentally it was also reported and taken for granted that the stock in Amalgamated Copper held by the estate of Marcus Daly had been sold to the Rockefellers at a price above the market quotation.

There is where the hitch came in putting Senator Clark's son in the President's chair. Marcus Daly's heirs, mindful of the dead copper king's hatred for Senator Clark, refused to sell one share of their holdings in the Amalgamated Company as soon as they learned that the Rockefeller and Clark were friendly.

It was "a kick from the grave," as Marcus Daly would have expressed it. Vice-President Rogers refused to say anything about the stories in circulation. He would not deny that there was trouble among the stockholders and that the heirs of the late Marcus Daly stood ready at all times to humiliate Senator Clark and his family.

Meanwhile Mr. Rogers, who handles and manages the Standard Oil interests in copper, has been in a somewhat embarrassing position, which, strange to say, millions cannot change, for the Daly family, considering chiefly of three beautiful and loyal daughters of the late Marcus Daly, who they believe that Senator Clark will be benefited.

GAVE UP HIS LIFE TO RESCUE A CAT.

Conductor John Boyle Fatally Injured While Saving a Pussy from Starvation in a Tree Top.

A big black cat with a white star on its forehead cried pitifully in the top of a tree in Newark avenue, Jersey City, and a crowd collected and looked up at it, but no one made a move to help it down.

It was the pet of little Minnie Wiseman, who vainly called to it.

It was afraid to come down and, gazing through the forty-five-foot distance that yawned between it and the sidewalk, it held tenaciously to the bough and cried almost like a child.

And the crowd below grew larger and larger and all sorts of schemes of rescue were being discussed when John Boyle, a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, happened along.

His home is at No. 6 Orchard street, next door to that of the cat's "little owner."

"Why, I'll bring the poor thing down," said he, pulling off his coat.

He began to climb the tree. By this time there were about three hundred persons watching him. At the window next by curious women looked out and followed the movements of the man who slowly ascended the tree.

The cat looked down upon him, and as though realizing that rescue was near at hand, ceased its wailing.

Boyle was at last near the cat. He paused, for the exertion had made him perspire freely and he was breathing heavily. When he had rested and started to cover the distance between himself and the cat, calling softly to it, the white cat wagged its tail and purred softly, but did not move.

Now, Boyle was within reach of it, and standing on a slender branch. He put forth his hand to seize the cat, when the support beneath his feet gave way. He grasped frantically at the nearby branches to save himself, but failed to grasp them and fell backward to the pavement.

A cry of horror went up from those who watched and several of the women fainted as Boyle struck the sidewalk.

He was removed to the hospital unconscious. He is suffering from internal injuries, and the doctors say his skull is fractured.

There is small hope of his recovery.

"HARD LUCK," SURE ENOUGH.

Corthell's "Hoodoo" Pursued Him Into Divorce Court.

Because she would not cook for another woman, Mrs. Jennie Corthell says she was "hoodooed." She is now suing for a divorce.

Brooklyn, granted her an order for alimony and counsel fees pending suit. William Corthell, the husband, is employed as an assistant by a prominent Union Square jewelry firm.

In her petition she says she went home to Elgin, Ill., last September, to visit her mother. Her husband was to send her money for six weeks and then a lump sum to pay her way back to Brooklyn. He did not send the money, but instead a letter attached to the petition in which he recited that he was born under an unlucky star and brought nothing but ill-luck to all he came in contact with.

"I have been sleeping on a folding bed and living off free lunches since you left," he wrote, "but each night in my dream room, over my pipe and bottle, I contemplate my unhappiness and say: 'It is a lucky star which is making me miserable and suffering with you.'"

Then he advised her that he intended going away to live the life of a recluse and told her not to waste stamps on her miserable and fool-for-nothing husband.

Mrs. Corthell hurried on here to her mother's home. When he saw her he handed her out $22 and told her to go home or he would be ruined. She went as far as Albany and returned.
